

"Friday 2013 youtubesessions"

A year (2013) with 52 sologuitarvideos played and published.

Jim Mings from Jazzguitargroup at Yahoo wrote to me:

"Congratulations on a wonderful year of music. I would be curious to hear your thoughts on how this process has affected your life and music."

My "Friday 2013 youtubesessions" had at least 90.000 listenings in 2012. I had 29.000 streamings at Spotify. Albums: The herr Bozo duo (2012), Two days in august (2010) For your dreams 2007) and Late that night (2005)

It was a challenge to make a new video sologuitarvideo every friday. (I have rehearsals and performances with The herr Bozo duo (Often with guestvocalist), Goran Lindelow trio (GL3) and with Eng/Lindelow quintet and work as a musicteacher so I had some other things to do last year...

I started to play sologuitar in the eighties and in periods with much teaching and familylife I always have found "some time between" to play sologuitar!

However 2012 I gave pretty often concerts and cafégigs. Even when I play duets with percussion in the herr Bozo duo it's in a way like like playing sologuitar. So I can say that I was well prepared to do a new video every friday. (I have a repertoire of about 100 tunes.)

I think that concentrating a little more at one tune a week and to play sologuitar every week made me develop my playing pretty much and to get my chordmelodyarrangements, improvisation chordmelodys and singlenotelines together. I think I play more freely now than a year ago!

Some weeks when I had much to do or was abroad I recorded 2-4 songs in one afternoon and then I published them at different fridays.

I had new fans and some new guitarfellows around the world that have been very supporting as Mr Beaumont (Jazzguitar group who also published sologuitarvideos once a week), Clive Davis (guitarist and composer), Brice Cross (a very fine electric guitarist), Stellan Sagvik (fantastic swedish composer) and Johan Dahlberg (swedish very fine acoustic guitarist).

I had so many kind comments! This is just to one of the songs; Starlights for my father (Am improvisation over Stella by starlight!
